

ABSTRACT

A provider architects an environment for connection to the Internet, to architect a network security system over a home server and Web terminal connected to the Internet. The network security system has a firewall and anti-virus software. The provider bills the initial fee in return for architecting the network security system. Furthermore, it makes a regular billing in return for providing such a service as regularly updating the system.